Cyber Protection Policy (Specimen), drafted for Corgi Insurance Company, Inc. · cyber insurance for U.S. businesses with $1M–$50M revenue · Corgi take-home, September 2026

What is in this package

File	What it is
01_Cyber_Protection_Policy_Specimen.pdf (27 pages)	The policy: cover, notices and disclaimers, Declarations, and Sections I–V (insuring agreements, definitions, coverage sections, exclusions, conditions). One form for every business, so the Declarations are a blank specimen with the standard limits and options filled in
02_Sample_Application_Cedar_Ridge.pdf (10 pages)	A completed application for a fictional 62-person Denver accounting firm. The last page shows how each answer sets its terms, and the Declarations entries it would receive
03_Decision_Rationale.pdf (17 pages)	Why each decision was made: who the policy is for, how these businesses lose money, how the limits and retention were set, what is covered and excluded and why, three claims start to finish, the trade-offs, and linked sources
Complete_Submission.pdf	This guide and all three documents in one file, with bookmarks

Suggested reading order

1. Rationale summary (Decision Rationale, page 1): the five decisions that matter most, in about three minutes.
2. Declarations (policy, Items 1–12): the standard limits, retention, options and credits.
3. Underwriter page (application, last page): how one applicant's answers turn into its price and terms.
4. Three claims, start to finish (Decision Rationale, part 8): how the policy works in practice.
5. The rest of the policy as needed. Bold words are defined in Section II.

The sample applicant in numbers

Term	Cedar Ridge
Policy aggregate limit	$2,000,000. Cedar Ridge holds about 31,000 sensitive records, moves client money and peaks in tax season, so the limit rule sets $2M
Retention	$7,500 per incident, after a 25% credit for MFA plus EDR
Optional coverages bought	P (dependent system failure, $250,000, 24-hour wait) and R (fraud limit raised to $500,000)
Illustrative premium	$7,677: $8,530 before a 10% credit for hardened remote access

Key assumptions

- The policy is a specimen drafted for Corgi Insurance Company, Inc. It is not a filed Corgi form. Cedar Ridge Accounting Group and all people named are fictional, and the insurer's contact details are left as placeholders.
- The premium is illustrative and would need actuarial rating before use.
- The specimen is the Colorado edition, written to Colorado law. The state amendatory endorsement is listed but not reproduced.
- Regulatory status is as of September 27, 2026: the federal CIRCIA final rule was not confirmed as published, and California SB 690 was awaiting the Governor (deadline September 30).
- External references (policy forms, frameworks, regulatory guidance and case law) are cited with links at the end of the Decision Rationale.
